ICS 0971-88

MEMORANDUM TO: IG/CI Members
IG/CM(P) Members
IG/CM(T) Members

25X1

FROM:

Director, Community Counterintelligence and Security Countermeasures Office

25X1

SUBJECT: HPSCI Request for a DCI Comprehensive Review of Organization and Effectiveness of CI/CM in the Intelligence Community

25X1

REFERENCE: Intelligence Authorization Act for FY 1989, Classified Annex prepared by the House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence (HPSCI)

25X1

ACTION: Addressee Response to CCISCMO due 30 November 1988

1. The referenced Intelligence Authorization Act for FY 1989 contained the following request:

"that the DCI conduct a comprehensive review of the current organization and effectiveness of the intelligence community's counterintelligence and security efforts in light of these (ed. note--see paragraph below) comments and suggestions, and report to the Committee with the fiscal year 1990 budget describing his views regarding the current intelligence community counterintelligence and security effort, what changes he has instituted and what changes he proposes to make."

25X1

2. As background to this request, the HPSCI had preceded it in the reference with the following paragraph:

"Concerning intelligence community counterintelligence and security programs, the Committee supported the DCI's initiative creating the CIA Counterintelligence Center and establishment of the Security Evaluation Office (SEO). While these are positive steps, the Committee remains concerned about the organization and focus of the intelligence community's foreign counterintelligence and security efforts and the need for development of a comprehensive, interagency counterintelligence and security program. While interagency groups have made a contribution, they appear to operate more on an ad hoc basis than in a true coordinating role. Moreover, the Committee still finds intelligence community security activities often operating in isolation from counterintelligence activities and programs focusing on human agents, with little attention paid to technical counterintelligence and basic physical, personnel, and information security. Some agencies lack an effective counterintelligence and security organization, and no agency has implemented a comprehensive counterintelligence personnel career development program." [REDACTED]

3. CCISCMO has been tasked with compiling the response for the DCI. While some of the information is available from the bi-annual reports prepared in response to the President's report on CI/CM and the parallel SSCI report, recipients are asked to provide additional information keyed to the HPSCI observations so that a comprehensive picture of accomplishments and shortfalls in the Intelligence Community can be made by the DCI to the Congress. [REDACTED]

25X1

4. As can be seen from the HPSCI statements, there is some merit to the position taken by HPSCI. However, through the IGs and bi-lateral actions of the Intelligence Community members, we believe much more has been accomplished than is reflected in the referenced document. This is especially true the past year where the IC has taken a more ecumenical approach to the CI/CM issues. [REDACTED]

25X1

5. This HPSCI request represents an opportunity for the recipients to provide not only comment on the existing situation, both Community-wide and within their own agency, but also to make a statement on shortcomings and where the IC effort should be heading regarding CI and CM. [REDACTED]

25X1

6. CCISCMO would appreciate input from all, as brief and succinct as possible, that conveys the sense of the effectiveness of present day CI/CM efforts, as well as recently instituted changes and proposed changes. While the Community aspect is important, more at issue here is what is taking place in the individual agency. Some items that come to mind are: [REDACTED]

25X1

- o New organization melding or enabling better internal CI/CM coordination within agencies. [REDACTED]
- o Placement of CI or CM specialists from other agencies on detail (e.g., FBI representative in CI Units at State Department and Department of Energy) to assist in establishing programs therein. [REDACTED]
- o Establishment of personnel programs for career development of CI specialists. [REDACTED]
